Begin under pressure to stay as

From Christopher Walker, Jerusalem

Mr Menachem Begin, the ailing 70-year-old Prime Minister of Israel, was under intense political pressure last night to reverse his surprise decision to resign.

Police were rushed to his residence to control crowds lemonstrating for him to stay in ower, while senior ministers continued trying to persuade the increasingly introverted and deressed leader to think again.

If they fail, it is probable that Israel will be thrust into a bitteriy divisive election campaign within the next few months, in which the future of the occupied West Bank will be a central issue.

Even before any final decision has emerged, one deputy minister called yesterday for the general election to be brought forward from 1985 to next spring.

Leaders of the various factions in the right-wing Likud coalition are due to meet Mr Begin this morning in a last ditch attempt to dissuade him from handing his letter of resignation to the

Hijackers threaten to blast plane

Bahrain (Reuter) - Fom hijackers holding as Air France jet at Tehran airport have demanded that France cease military aid to the governments of Chad, Iraq and Lebanon and release Lebanese prisoners from French jails, Iran's national news agency, Iran, said last night. The hijackers, who had identified themselves as Lehanese, threatened to dynamite the aircraft if their demands were not met within 48 hours. Some 20 sengers and seven crew believed to be on board the aircraft, bljacked on a flight from Vienna to Paris on Saturday. The hijackers are said to be armed with gams and hand grenades. Retail sales falter as boom fades

By Derek Harris Commercial Editor

The fall-off in consumer spending during the middle of August had increased fears in the retail trades that the consumer boom is fizzling out.

Mr Colin Richmond, who that extraordinary theory, has an even more bizarre explanation: it was buried there in 1963 by Jorge Luis Borge, Argentina's greatest writer, to honour his grandmother.

Mr Richmond's account of how he came to that unlikely con-clusion is a classic piece of historical detective work. He is a history don at Keele University, and he pursued the mystery through obscure archives and long forgotten documents, helped by strange coincidences, until his theory passed two conclusive

He decuced that Señor Borge had taken the head to his grandmother's former home in toke when he visited the city 20 years ago. The occupier, who died earlier this year, confirmed to Mr Richmond that indeed the great man had brought a mysterious box with him, and asked permission to bury it there.

And so the head of St Penket rests in the shadow of Penkhull as Sinor Borge's tribute to Fanny his adored English

They were together in that town in July 10, 1868; the notebooks record that they were on one side on one side of it, in Berne, on July 9, and on the other in Lausanne, on July 11:

Bishop would certainly have visited the cathedral and its museum, as he did wherever he went. He accidentally gave the game away in an article he wrote for the Woolhope Club, a body of Victorian antiquarians. In the proceedings of the club for October, 1868, he wrote: "St Penket's head found its way into the cathedral of St Nicholas at

Dance: John Percival assesses the New York City Ballet at Covent Garden A fidelity that complements the music

Yesterday was Robert Irving's seventi-eth birthday, and New York City Ballet celebrated it a couple of hours early with the presentation of a cake and the obvious musical tribute on stage at the end of their performance on Saturday night. If it seems eccentric, when there are several new works to be considered, to start a ballet notice by honouring a music director, that is justified by the important place music has in the work of this

It is not just by chance that so many of their ballets are given no other title than the pieces of music they use. Generally, the structure and whole character of the works are dictated by the score, but to think of the pieces just as "music visualizations" would miss the point completely. On the foundation of the music, the choreographer invents a new structure that complements and extends its origins.

George Balanchine did that better than anyone else. You can see it particularly in his great works such as Agon. When Stravinsky wrote it for Balanchine in 1956-57, people found his terse, knotty treatments of old dance forms difficult to follow. The choreography clarifies them, helps you to follow the shapes and rhythms, but also builds fascinating patterns of its

The Balanchine genius is equally apparent even in a minor work such as Ballade, to Faure's Ballade for piano and orchestra. On one level, it can be watched simply as attractive dances for two soloists and a group of 10 women, patterned to fit the moods of the score. At another, it is an evocation of romantic feelings. The way the one man echoes the leading woman's movements on his first appearance. and supports her without their eyes meeting, gives the clue that he exists only in her memory or imagination.

I like especially the way Balanchine has set out to reveal a different aspect of Merrill Ashley, whose brayura technique and long, strong, thoroughbred physique compel her usually to be seen in brilliant, assertive roles. Ballade uses her amazing technique with a carefree lightness and sensitivity to show the gentle, even shy woman behind the virtuoso. Ib Andersen's quiet firm anthority suits perfectly in support, Judging by the few ballets of his that have seen. Peter Martins has understood and inherited Balanchine's way of working The Stravinsky Concerto for Two Solo Pianos certainly exemplifies it, and I found the ballet more rewarding on a second viewing. when the relationships between music and movement became clearer.

The weekend programmes introduced two more works by Jerome Robbins. Concertino is a little display piece for three dancers (originally given as one section of Chamber Works during the 1982 Stravinsky Festival). The Concertino for 12 instruments inspires a humorous development of trio partnering. followed immediately by a quick solo for each dancer, with sharp footwork and scribbly arms, to the much earlier Three Pieces for solo clarinet. The contrasting qualities of muscular Sean Lavery and sinuous Mel Tomlinson are well displayed, but I thought Kyra but bland style. Robbins's Gershwin Concerto uses a large cast for an evocation of the sort of jazz ballet that was attempted in the Thirties, although presented in the form of a classic ballet. In choreography as in music, the Charleston and other popular dance styles coexist with more academic forms. Four soloists are used. Melinda Roy seems to represent a "Miss Turnstiles" character, a nobody who is really somebody; her lively, natural manner is nicely contrasted with the svelle poise of Maria Calegan as a more sophisticated lady. In the first movement, they are joined by Ib Andersen (or Kipling

a wittier manner to sauce her smooth

Houston at another performance) as an extrovert young man about town. Mel Tomlinson provides the male focus in the second movement with a dark glamour. The music is a limitation, an uneasy compromise between Gershwin's natural style and the concerto form. Yet it has a brash charm which the ballet shares, and Robbins's skill never deserts him in showing off his cast. Perhaps the choice of repertory for London has put special emphasis on Maria Calegari's rapidly developing talent but she has had a special success in many ballets with her beautifully smooth, elegant and fluent dancing. Another good dancer is Valentina Kozlova, who receily joined from the Bolshor Bailet: swift, light and stylish. Her husband. Leonid Kozlov, 15 a strong partner but, dancing with her in Souvenir de Florence, looked too self-absorbed in contrast to her lively manner.

For a company where the choreographers have always been the real stars. New York City Ballet allows its dancers to develop a surprising degree of individuality. Some speciators find this disconcerting, it seems to me to demonstrate a strength that can rely on a sense of common purpose without needing the drilled look of many classic companies

Death in Venice King's Theatre

A new production of Death in Venice, especially when it is only the second to be seen in this country, is bound to prompt new thoughts about Britten's final opera. However, the first thing to be said about the version seen in Edinburgh is that it reveals a new Aschenbach in Anthony Rolfe Johnson. Of all the roles that Britten wrote for Sir Peter Pears. this one might have been thought the most difficult to fill in any other way, not least because it seems to presuppose a tenor of advanced years. There was indeed a flicker of doubt when Mr Johnson opened the opera in a quite different way, youthful and cornest. The feeling lasted, though, for about five seconds. After that Mr Johnson had established his right to the part with his great understanding of its musical and psychological awkwardnesses, his exemplary diction and his absolute determination.

It is hardly necessary to add that any reconsideration of the opera at this stage will be

But lack of space cannot altogether excuse a production which appears to have no idea of what to do with the minor characters, which is often rudely static and which is embarrassed some of the interludes. Worst of all, Mr Rochaix has the bright idea of giving us a crib to Aschenbach's recitatives in the form of subtitles on illuminated slides. This is a gross insult to Mr Johnson, whose every word makes itself heard and felt, and fortunately it was dropped on Priday after some hilarious

The novelist and the boy would be sleeping with a sword between them, since this Aschenbach has evidently chosen an unrealizable passion, and it is from the standpoint of a fearsome sterility that he must lash himself and agonize. To Mr Johnson's great credit, he makes all this self-destructiveness not only understandable but also involving and even interesting.

obviously illusory. Death in l'enice is not about a man in love with a boy, but about a man out of love with himself. Mr Johnson presents such a character with unforgettable effect on stage, and Roderick Brydon explores his soul in the pit, where the score is very beautifully and also very pointedly played. The orchestral postlude, like Tadzio's smile to Aschenbach, is almost more than mere human beings should be expected to cope with.

The many faces of Aschenbach's tempter are sketched with quite dramatic flair by Barry Mora. There is also a silver-tongued Apollo from Andrew Dalton (not aided by having to appear on stage as if coming half-clothed from his dressing room), and a bright impersonation of another range of small parts from Alan Oke. Claudio Arrau's Prom cancellation was, of course, a heavy loss; but it was also undoubtedly our gain on Saturday night, for it brought Philip Fowke an extra Prom appearance, and, uncannily. in a programme that could have been tailor-made for him.

That co-existence of a high musical intellect with elegance, wit and unashamedly joyful showmanship, which marks out Mr Fowke among his own generation of pianists, has an unfailing alchemizing effect on those parts of the repertoire which will never be pure gold. Richard Strauss's D minor Burleske, for instance - a teasing, ingenious, but at the most glistering romp with its coy timpani solos and wolf-whistling piccolo - became arresting purely through Mr Fowke's shrewd judging of expressive and stylistic scale and of each phrase's own weight and Hilary Finch peculiar tone of voice.
These qualities, rare in their fusion, were further focused in Weber's Konzertstück in F minor after the interval. Sub-Beethovenian in temper here, living the life of a salon forest-drama there, its burgeoning Romanticism was realized by Mr Fowke with a childlike keenness. Yet the sophistication of the concluding galop was also made an organic part of its character, with its audacious sequences and glis-sandos played with the most subtle panache The Royal Philharmonic under Norman Del Mar were never quite a match for Mr Fowke's lightning responses, though their playing became more alert as the evening progressed. By the time Hindemith's too rarely heard Symphonic Metamorphosis of Symphonic Metamorphosis of themes by Weber was reached, they had galvanized themselves well enough to enjoy the oafish humour of the "Turandot" scherzo, a monstrous Chinese butterfly flapping its way through a New Orleans saloon. Weber, as shown to us by Mr Fowke, would have enjoyed every minute. Hilary Finch

Barry Manilow Blenheim Palace

in one the season's most outrageous pieces of theatre Barry Manilow, the boy from Brooklyn, played his weekend concert before forty thousand people at the Duke of Mariborough's humble Blen-heim abode, Manilow may lack something when compared with other ballad singers but he and his audience share a mutual sense of occasion. Picnicking families, grandmothers in tow, cohed and aahed at appropriate intervals while the ample ladies from Manilow's ample fan club wan-dered into realms of ecstasy at every change of key or shirt.

Manilow is virtually impossible to analyze as an entertainer, he is a tolerable variety singer and pianist with a few pleasant songs and a whole raft of awful ones. Only the showbiz industry could have elevated him to the rank of superstar, but his fans are willing accomplices in the charace.

What Manilow is expert at is convincing people of his overriding sincerity himself up a fraction. He sells glossily packaged values, like holiday brochures, romantic candle-lis dinners and fluffy slippers, with the assurance of a used-car salesman. Knowing his audience's weak spots, he tickles them mercilessly. And why not? He is also adept at offering value for money, playing a long set and not skimping on the big pro-duction - lasers, schoolgarl choirs, superbly kitsch backdrops of the Palace and fictitious backstreet pizza parlours.

Manilow sings about "Memories". "The Old Songs" and the ubiquitous "Mandy", cracks a few risque jokes about his nose and generally titillates his female fans until the atmosphere is redolent of a frisky ben party. He loves to portray himself as the underdog. the poor Jewish boy made good, and that may account for his staggering success. Deep down Manilow either represents something very ordinary and comforting or something intensely irritating, depending on your persepctive.

Eventually, the songs seem to blend into one half-remembered tune which, like supermarket muzak, it is impossible to escape.
The evening was a triumph of mediocrity. But it was a triumph none the less.

Joan Goodman meets Franc Roddam, the British director of The Lords of Discipline, currently showing in London Refusing to give in to Hollywood Franc Roddam sees himself as a survivor of the Hollywood wars and he has directed a film that, on ordinary English family for many one level, is a metaphor for that experience. The Lords of Discipline, which has just opened in London and is based on the Pat Conroy novel, is about a cadet in a southern military school in America who is confronted with the injustice of racism when the first Black is admitted. A good old southern boy himself, Will McLean (played by David Keith) does not want to rock the system but becomes a reluctant hero when the traditional "hell night" akes a nasty turn.

"It's an allegory of America", says Roddam, an Englishman who has spent 21/2 years there. "In the school I saw high idealism, authoritarianism and violence that's my vision of America. And it echoed my own personal time in Hollywood, dealing with the bureaucracy. I saw the school as a corporation. I see America as a corporation. My film is about how the individual copes. My time in Hollywood was like 'hell night to me. They try to break you. They tie you up in deals, keep you off the market, keep you waiting. I was off the screen for 18 months. It's hard for me not to work but I refused to be broken. I had a very clear vision of what I

He made his feature film debut with Quadrophenia, a keenly-observed study of a group of sixties mods which dealt unflinchingly with the violence inherent in their lives. According to Roddam: "If you play it too soft, the kids will say this is a film by somebody who doesn't understand us. If you can be as tough as they are, they love the film and go with it. Once you have them, you can steer them away from violence. What happens in Quadrophenia is that anyone involved in a violent act comes out badly. I don't want to preach to the converted." Quadrophenia was a critical and a commercial success and brought Roddam to the attention of Hollywood. He arrived at a bad time, he says, just after the Heaven's Gate fiasco, when the industry lost its nerve. The Leicester Building Society now promises you 9.25% (13.21% gross).*

Does yours promise as much?

Last year we introduced the Leicestercard, giving our share account investors a unique advantage.

A few months ago we introduced a unique link with National Girobank, which lets our investors use their Leicestercard share accounts in any of 20,000 post offices.

Today, we're announcing our best offer yet for higher rate investors.

The new Leicestercard Bond.

ı li

1.8% extra for the next three years.

Unlike most building societies, which only offer their higher rate schemes for two years, ours is for three.

For all that time, you can be sure of earning 1.8% more than our ordinary share account rate.

The way interest rates are looking now, that's a very generous promise indeed.

We offer monthly income, when others don't.

We know that many investors who'd like to take advantage of high interest schemes, need to receive their interest as monthly income.

Yet most building societies don't allow it.

The Leicestercard Bond does.

We'll be happy to pay you your interest every month as long as your Bond is opened with at least £1,000.

The interest you will earn is currently 9.05% (12.92% gross to a basic rate taxpayer), a full 1.8% more than our ordinary share account rate.

Only £500 minimum-not £1,000.

At such a high rate of interest, you'll probably want to put as much as you possibly can into a Leicestercard Bond.

But if you're a smaller investor, don't despair.
Our minimum requirement is only £500. Many of the other leading societies ask for as much as £1,000.

Extra interest bonus.

If you don't opt for the monthly (or six monthly) income facility, there's a special bonus for you.

We compound the interest we pay you twice a year so that it's worth even more – currently 9.25%.

Again, that's an offer you'll find hard to match from any other building society.

No-one else offers you the Leicestercard benefits.

In order to take advantage of our offer, you'll need to have at least £100 in a Leicestercard Share Account.

(You can open it while you're filling in the application form on this advertisement.)

As well as earning you the full share account rate of interest (currently 7.25%), you can also have a Leicestercard and all of its benefits.

They include discounts on a wide range of goods and services offered by over 5,000 retailers throughout the country and commission-free travellers' cheques.

And the opportunity to use any one of 20,000 post offices to deposit or withdraw from your account. In some areas, you can also use your Leicestercard in our self service tills.

You can even change your mind.

Naturally, such a higher rate scheme means you can't expect the instant withdrawal of a share account.

Even so, after the first six months have passed, you can give us six months' notice of closure at any stage.

If you decide to close your Leicestercard Bond within the first two years, we'll still pay you an extra 0.5% over the share account rate.

And if you close it during the third year, we increase this to an extra 0.75%.

So even if your situation changes and you have to ask for your money back early, you'll still receive a useful interest bonus.

Apply today before we're over-subscribed.

At the moment, there's nothing available from other building societies which offers all the features of the Leicestercard Bond.

Once we've received sufficient investment in this Bond, we reserve the right to withdraw the offer. So you'd be wise to send us the application form and cheque today.

But if you want more details, call into your nearest Leicester Building Society branch or tick the appropriate box on the application form.

You can invest up to £30,000 (or £60,000 for joint investors) in the Leicester Building Society.

*9.25%=13.21% gross to a basic rate taxpayer, when half-yearly interest is compounded.

SPECTRUM

Two years after his Booker Prize-winning Novel, Midnight's Children, Salman Rushdie turns from India to Pakistan and to the twisted domestic and political origins of the feud between President Zia and former Prime Minister Bhutto. Like its predecessor, Shame is a mixture of fantasy and fact; names sit alongside pseudonyms. In this first extract, Raza Hyder (bearing a strong likeness to the future President Zia) wins early military success while his wife, Bilquis, loses their son. Iskander Harappa (closely resembling future Prime Minister Bhutto) is about to marry into Hyder's family when war intervenes.

THE CORD AND THE NOOSE

that hot season, the two newly artitioned nations announced the ommencement of hostilities on the Kashmiri frontier. You cannot beat a northern war in the hot season; officers, footsoldiers, cooks all rejoiced is they headed for the coolness of the ulls. "Yara, this is luck, na?" "At least his year I won't die in that damn neat." O backslapping camaraderie of the meteorologically fortunate!

There were, inevitably, deaths; but the organizers of the war had catered for these as well. Those who fell in nattle were flown directly, first-class, to the perfumed gardens of Paradise, to ne waited on for all eternity by four gorgeous Houris, untouched by man or djinn. "Which of your Lord's bless-ings", the Quran inquires, "would you

"He's coming!" Raza deafened his vife, causing earthen pitchers to topple rom the heads of womenservants and rightening the geese. "What did I tell ou, Mrs?" He set his cap more auntily on his head, slapped his wife uo firmly on the stomach, joined the alms of his hands together and made diving gestures.

"Whoosh!" he shouted. "Voom, wife! Here he comes!" And he roared off into the north, promising to win a creat victory in honour of his forthoming son, and leaving behind him a Bilguis who, being washed for the first ume by the solipsistic fluids of motherhood, had neglected to notice the tears in her husband's eyes, the cars turning his black eye-pouches into velvet bags, the tears which were among the earliest pointers that the future strong-man of the nation was of Back then everything was smaller than the type that cried too easily...in private with the frustrated Rani Humayun, Bilquis crowed proudly: "Never mind this war foolishness; the important news is that I am making a boy to marry your unborn daughter."

An extract from the family's saga of Raza and Bilquis, given in the formulaic words which it would be a gross sacrilege to alter: "When we heard that our Razzoo had pulled off an attacking coup so daring that there was no option but to call it a triumph, we started off by refusing to believe our ears, - for already in those days even the sharpest ears had developed the fault of becoming wholly unreliable when they were attuned to the radio news bulletins; on such occasions everybody heard things that could not possibly have been the case. But then we nodded our heads, understanding the taking of Aansu, the advantages of that a man whose wife is about to bear him a son is capable of anything.

"Yes, it was the unborn boy who was responsible for this, the only victory in the history of our armed forces, - which formed the basis of Raza's reputation for invincibility, a maternal grandmother) he cried too reputation which quickly became easily. Just when he should have been invincible itself, - so that not even the long humiliating years of his decline proved capable of destroying it. He even in public. Tears were seen sliding returned a nero, having seized for our off the wax on his bulbous moustache, holy new land a mountain valley so and his black eye-pouches glistened high and inaccessible that even goats once more like little pools of oil. His had difficulty in breathing up there; so intrepid he was, so tremendous, that all true patriots had to gasp - and you "Hey, Raz," she consoled her must not believe that propaganda husband in words iced with the brittle which says that the enemy did not

"For all peoples, there are places that mean too much. 'Aansu!' we wept with pride; with true patriotism we sobbed, 'Only imagine - he has taken the Aansu-ki-Wadil'. It's true: the capture of that fabled 'valley of tears' made us all weep as uncontrollably as, in later years, its conqueror became famous for doing. But after a while it was clear that nobody knew what to do with that place where your spit froze before it hit the ground; except Iskander Harappa, of course; who, dry-Army morale was high; but Rani eyed as ever, went off to the Tribal Humayun was most put out, because it Agencies Department and purchased would have been unpatriotic to hold a more or less the whole caboodle, dirtwedding reception in wartime. The cheap, snow-cheap, for cash money on function had been postponed, and she the nail, and a few years later there stamped her feet. Raza Hyder, how- were ski-lodges up there, and schedever, stepped contentedly into the uled air flights, and European goings-camouflaged jeep of his flight from the on at night that made the local tribals faint for shame.

> "But did Raz, our great hero, see anything of that foreign exchange? Here the teller invariably smites her forehead with the palm of her hand.) "No, how would he, that great Army dumbo? Isky always got there first. But" (and now the narrator adopts the most cryptic, menacing tone of which she is capable), "it is being there last that counts."

> At this point I must interrupt the legend. The duel between Raza Hyder (promoted to Major for his Aansu exploit) and Iskander Harappa, which began, but certainly did not end, in Aansu, will have to wait yet awhile; because now that Old Razor Guts is back in town, and it is peacetime again, the wedding is about to be celebrated which will make the mortal adversaries into cousins-in-laws: into family.

it is today; even Raza Hyder was only a Major. But he was like the city of Karachi itself, going places, growing fast, but in a stupid way, so that the bigger they both got, the uglier they became. I must tell you what things were like in those early days after the partition: the city's old inhabitants, who had become accustomed to living in a land older than time, and were therefore being slowly eroded by the implacably revenant tides of the past, had been given a bad shock by independence, by being told to think of themselves, as well as the country itself, as new.

Well, their imaginations simply were not up to the job, you can understand that; so it was the ones who really were new, the distant cousins and half-acquaintances and total strangers who poured in from the east to settle in the Land of God, who took over and got things going.

Raza Hyder had already shown, in the energy-giving influx of immigrants, of novel beings; but energy or no energy, he was unable to prevent his first-born son from being strangled to death in the womb.

Once again (in the opinion of his demonstrating the stiffness of his upper lip he began to bawl his eyes out, wife, Bilquis, however, did not let fall a single tear.

"Hey, Raz," she consoled her certainty of her desperation, "Razzoo. chin up. We'll get him back the next himself and forced his troops to call him so, by order? Old Leaky Water Reservoir, more like."

An umbilical cord wound itself aroud a baby's neck and was transformed into a hangman's noose (in which other nooses are prefigured), into the breath-stopping, silken rumal of a Thug; and an infant came into the world handicapped by the irreversible misioriune of Deing Gead Defore ! born. "Who knows why God will do such things?" Bariamma, mercilessly, told her gandson. "But we submit, we must submit. And not take out babytears before women."

However, being stone dead was a handicap which the boy managed, with commendable gallantry, to surmount. Within a matter of months, or was it only weeks, the tragically cadaverous infant had "topped" in school and at college, had fought bravely in war, had married the wealthiest beauty in town and risen to a high position in the government. He was dashing, popular, handsome, and the fact of his being a corpse now seemed of no more consequence than would a slight limp or a minor speech impediment.

Of course I know perfectly well that the boy had in reality perished before he even had time to be given a name. His subsequent feats were performed entirely within the distracted imaginations of Raza and Bilguis, where they acquired an air of such solid actuality that they began to insist on being provided with a living human being who would carry them out and make Possessed by the fictive triumphs of

A surprisingly small bundle was returned by Bilquis to the midwife, who bore it out to the anxious father. "A daughter, Major Sahib, and so beautiful, like the day, dontyouthinkso?" In the delivery room, silence flooded from the pores of the exhausted mother; in the anteroom, Raza was quiet, too. Silence; the ancient language of defeat.

Defeat? But this was Old Razor Guts himself, conqueror of glaciers, vanquisher of frosty meadows and icefleeced mountain sheep! Was the future strong-man of the nation so easily crushed? Not a bit of it.

"Mistakes are often made!" Raza shouted. "Terrible blunders are not unknown! Why, my own fifth cousin by marriage when he was born . .! But me no buts, woman, I demand to see the hospital supervisor!"

And even louder: "Babies do not come clean into this world!" And blasted from his lips like cannonballs: "Genitalia! Can! Be!

Obscured!" Raza Hyder raging roaring. The midwife stiffened, saluted; this was a military hospital, do not forget, and Raza outranked her, so she admitted yes, what the Major Sahib was saying was possible certainly. And fled. Hope rose in the moist eyes of the father, also in the dilated pupils of Bilquis, who had heard the noise, of course. And now it was the baby, its very essence in doubt, who fell silent and began to

The supervisor (a Brigadier) entered the quaking room in which the future President was trying to affect biology by a superhuman act of will. His words, weighty, final, outranking Raza's, murdered hope. The stillborn son died again, even his ghost snuffed out by the medico's fatal speech: "No possibility of error. Please to note that the child has been washed. Prior to swaddling procedure. Matter of sex is beyong dispute. Permit me to tender my congratulations." But what father would allow his son, twice-conceived, to be executed thus, without a fight? Raza tore away swaddling cloth; having penetrated to the baby within, he jabbed at its nether zones: "There I ask you, sir, what is that?" - "We see here the expected configuration, also the not uncommon post-natal swelling of the female . . . "A bump!" Raza shricked hopelessly. "Is it not, doctor, an absolute and

I shot upright, with the speed of a rabbit surrounded by men holding machine gans, and gaped at the speaker. The form was the form of Jeeves, and the shanmer was a Jeevesian shimmer, but the face was someone else's. It contained a small moustache, a pair of sun-glasses and a cigarette attached to the end of the mouth in a position which I can only describe as daugling. I felt as a baby might feel when it looks up from the prant to see its mother and finds itself staring at Al Capone.

"Where on earth is Jeeves?" I stuttered nothing."

That seemed to make sense. It would certainly explain why I had gone around all my life seeing things. I indicated to the man that he could now run my bath.

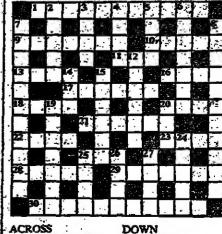

"Very good, monsieur. Oh and mon-sieur, a gentleman named Clarence Osprey called earlier this morning. He seemed under the impression that you had become involved with his fiancee and he wished to knock off your bloc."
"Oh Lord," I grouned. I could see how

Clarence had got that impression. "What did you do?"

"I quoted some apt lines from Victor Hugo after which I showed him the door and assured him he had the wrong address.

Suddenly I felt better. This bimbo, if not another Jeeves, certainly had the makings. Under my mature tuition, he might well develop into un gentilhomme d'un gentilbomme, if you get my meaning.

sideways look at the British way of life

Had The Times been taking a sideways look at the British in 1879, this entry, under the headline "Coursing by Proxy" would doubtless have found its way on to the features editor's desk with a memo saying "follow up". Describing the thoroughly novel experience of watching grey-hounds chase a mechanical hare in Hendon, our property considered that the state of the same of the sa reporter concluded that the sport was "undoubtedly an exciting and interesting one". He little knew that he had just observed the birth of a craze that in 50 years would sweep the country, one destined to become the solace of the working man and the source of much grievance to the working man's wife whose weekly income was frequently much reduced because of it. Nor could be have predicted that such an ostensibly silly occupation as watching half a dozen dogs chase a dummy round a track would, for nearly half a century, prove the second most popular spectator sport in the country – as it still is today, ahead of horse racing and second only to football. Or that the Queen's consort, the Duke of Edinburgh, would own a dog (Camira Flash) that would win a Derby.

The first official race meeting was held at Belle Vue, Manchester in 1926. Within months the sport was racing ahead, with dogs running round tracks all over the place. One could have expected some falling off during the Depression, but instead dog racing went from strength to strength. By 1940-more than 100 dogs were racing under National Greyhound Racing Club rules and by the end of the decade up to fifty million spectators were going to the dogs in a year.

But Sirius had reached his zenith. The 1950s sawa gradual decline in track attendances and the tax on the tote was only partly to blame. Sports fans went back to their first loves - football and cricket. people bought motor cars and, later, televisions.

Today fewer than half the original tracks survive and even some of the "greats" sit under sentence of the axe. White City, it is strongly rumoured, will soon no longer throb to the roar of the crowd and the pelting of paws and even the great Perry Barr's existence is in question. The centres that will survive, everyone agrees, are those which are prepared to improve their facilities - or have already done so - pushing the image of dog racing inexorably up the market place away from its traditional pitch of serge and sawdust, tickets and touts.

A trip to Walthamstow Stadium, considered by the cognoscenti to be the toff among racetracks, will put you in the picture. Where, you might ask as you make your way past the Mercedes and the great smell of Brut to your pre-booked table at the swish Paddock Grill, are the flat caps and fag ends of yesteryear? They're still here of course, down on the rails or on the other, "wrong", side of the tracks where tic-tac men perform incredible feats with their fingers and beer bubbles still wink at the brim. But here you can sit "god-like" (as in gallery) to watch the show, protected from the elements by a vast sheet of plate glass, while hoi-polloi (or true enthusiasts) battle with the elements and the odds. Here you can study the card in a desultory way between courses, sip dry white with your dover sole, summon a smiling runner to place your bet at the touch of a bell and rub shoulders - if you have to - with satin rather than serge.

After the last race you can make your way upstairs for the cabaret and forget about Black Beauty's failure to overhaul Haringay Hattie on the home straight while another black beauty gives throat to the blues, played by a near perfect replica h's great stuff if you like this kind of a night out but it's hardly "going to the dogs", In fact for the younger set, the hounds beating their heats out to get to the hare seem as incidental to the evening's entertainment as underwater dancers in a Californian poolside restaurant. And yet it is just such youngsters and their parents that the tracks need to attract if the greyhound game is to survive.

Ray Spalding
Racing Manager and Steward at Walthamstow Stadium

I'm in charge of all the racing I decide which dogs race against which officiate at all the meetings. attend all the trials. (Holidays? You must be joking.) I have to try and see that every dog has an equal chance, grading as closely as possible, allocating the traps (a wide runner in No 6, inside runner in No I etc). If you've four wide runners in a race you see the problem - and with five meetings a fortnight, ten races a night, six dogs in each, that's 300 dogs of which you'll have 50 winners and 200 disappointed losers. A dog devalues every time it runs — it only has certain number of races in its career and there's only one derby winner who gets £25,000 prize money. You never know what sort of dog you've got until you've shown it the hare.

HARE RESTORER

Authory Lilley Starter by night, refuse collector by day I took over from my father about 10 years ago. He still fills in for me when I have a holiday. I love the work, especially the dogs. When I first started, my feet ached — it's quite a walk, round and back, eight or ten times a night. It's my job to collect the dogs and handlers from the paddock, lead them round the track and back, see they're all in and facing the right way (oh yes, there have been some turnarounds) and then when they're all in signal for the off. I've seen some funny things hisppen...once I got the race off and all the crowd started hollerin' because there were two trap 4s. Race had to be stopped of course. Then there was the time when suddenly there were seven dogs running some geezer had slipped one under the rails... caused an uproar until the police got him. Now all that concerns me is doing my job right. My dad was less particular - just kept on walking.

Dong Tyler Bookmaker and Chairman of the Bookmakers Advisory Committee

My family were all in the greyhound business — but as men don't receive a wage packet punters and gamblers. I came out of the Army in 1946 and decided to isn't there. We get a lot of criticism, become a bookmaker. (You need a but without bookmakers all the lot of common sense, a head for figures and you've got to be a bit lucky.) The first thing a bookmaker or anyone else - has to do is try to odds. But it's an honourable profession, hardly ever a fight. A short head might cost a man his make a profit. For that you need the punters to keep coming through the last £5. turnstiles, but habits have changed.

STAKE AND CHIPS Hilda Spelling Tote Runner, wife and mother

I first came to work here when I prefer it when it's busy. It's changed was married with young children a lot over the years, there used to be and needed a bit of pin money working in evenings meant I didn't have to leave the family during the day. That was 21 years ago and I'm still bere. I'm usually the first in, at about 5.55pm, and I get home at about 11pm. My husband doesn't mind at all, he likes watching television. I like to be out, meeting people - it's always fun though I a lot over the years, there used to be more regulars, families . . . quite a few have died or moved away. I've served lots of stars - Bernie Winters, George Cole. Mildred from George and ... sometimes the punters are very generous if they've won, other times they don't tip you at all. I take all sizes of bet from 50p to £100, but I never bet. I learned the hard way and lost all my wages in one night.

H.M.V.

I loved the dogs from the first time I went to a meeting at Wembley with my parents when I was 13. Apart from annual holidays I hav't missed a meeting at Walthamstow for 26 years, I got my first dog for my 21st birthday - since then I've had twelve. Though this one, Sal's Champion, is a bitch I tend to dogs, I think most women do. There is no thrill that can match seeing your dog going over the line to win, especially if it has run a clever race (I love late runners). It costs about £22 a week to keep a dog in training and no, on the whole you don't get your money back, ever with appearance money. You own for pleasure really, not money. I always find mine - and other people's - homes when they retire. So far I've homed over in the Royal Army Medical Corps and when I came out there were all those films about Frankenstein. I've been going to the dogs all my life, since I was 17 going to flapping tracks all over the country. I'm considered the best judge of dogs at Wathamstow, I've got a gift for it. I always go on the rails - no drinking while I'm betting, you've got to be alive at the game - and I bet with the bookmakers, never the tote. With the bookies you can get what odds you want. Fewer go to the dogs now - most of the punters have done their money in the betting shop, silly idiots. But it's still the poor man's sport, always will be. Costs £5 to go in the members' enclosure at the horses, but only £1.50 at the dogs.

TOP DOG Fred Underhill Secretary NGRC

Greyhound racing has been badly hit by the recession. In 1946, 36 million people went to the dogs. Last year 4 1/2 million went through National Greybound Racing Club turnstiles. Drastic times call for drastic measures and the laws relating to on-course betting should also be amended. At the moment bookmakers are making it hand over fist, with none of the overheads the tote has to meet.

Being a trainer means a lot of early mornings, late nights, travelling – dedicated stuff. It's a pressured job, the phone never stops ringing owners wanting to know about their dogs, what their chances are. If we could predict that there'd be a lot more rich people around. A lot depends on having good staff. Apart from feeding and exercising it's my job to take the dog along to the trials to see if it's any good, then to maintain its condition and watch it improve. A good greyhound looks good, though you don't have to pay a fortune. I've had dogs bought for a modest £300 who've gone on to win $5,000 and more in open races, so you can make money. I'd like to see the government put back some of the money they take from the tracks. to see more tracks round football pitches and a time when courses were fully tote operated. Bookies never win, you know, but they always have Rolls-Royces!

Better safe than sorry

It's common know-ledge that the pain of childbirth is instanly forgonen the minute a baby is born - if it weren't, we'd all be only children. What no one ever told me is that the pain of parenting goes clean out of your mind the minute your children push mind the minute your cining push off. I found this out the hard way when my favurite five year old, Lucy Gales-Tooke, accompanied by one teddy bear, two security blankets, three Tom and Jerry video-cassettes and her school reading primer, came for a weekend visit. for a weekend visit.

I had forgotten that a house is not a home as soon as a small child sets foot in it; it's a high-risk adventure playground. Perfectly safe-looking bannisters become vicious bars between which a small person's head may become varieties. may become wedged. The spring locks on cupboard doors are designed to close on little fingers before the owner of the fingers has finished choosing a chocolate biscuit. Within minutes of Lucy's arrival, I was back in that suddenly remembered old routine of "Be careful, darling . . . don't do that . . . keep away from there, sweetheart sounding ust like Joyce Grenfell doing her monologue, "The

I refute this charge since never once, ulike one of my neighbours, did I follow my children to the beach with a tin of Johnson's Baby Powder and insist that each little precious was dried off and powdered between the toes after every swim.

Despite my eternal vigilance, my son once fell backwards on to:a carelessly packed breadknife what larking about on a picnic and my daughter managed to embed a needle in her knee. Demonstrating that nothing had changed, Lucy skipped around a corner ahead of me and by the time I caught up with ber, seconds later, had fallen into a bed of nettles and had been bitten by

The price of parenthood, it seems is never being able to read the Sunday papers in peace and running the risk of chronic unpopularity. This was not a risk that worried previous generations of parents. "Because I'm older than you are and bigger than you are and I pay the rent and that's why", was my mother's method of dealing with my whined why-can't-I's. This tough tactic, along with compulsory liberty bodices and sock-garters, belongs to the lost art of parenting.

To give in to a child's expert wheedling is perilous

No one would want to see a revival of such sternness, even though "Because I say so," is, in the short term, less wearisome than Well, you see, angel, mummy won't let you go to the park by yourself because although most people are very nice, some people are very nasty and might hurt a little girl if her mummy or daddy aren't there to look after her".

What is clear is that although parents are no longer required to bark out "No", "Don't" and "Absolutely not" as if they were sergeant majors, they must still keep these words in their vocabulary. To give in to a child's expert wheedling is perilous. "I didn't like her going to the swings by herself, but she loved going so much and went on at me until I let her," said the heartbroken mother of a vanished four-year-old.

A little boy allowed to be up and buying sweets late in the evening is kidnapped and horribly assaulted; a little girl is taken from a fairground and murdered. In West Germany, hot weather sends the statistics for attacks on children soaring along with the rising barometer. The state's answer is a radio campaign which urges parents to keep hold of their children's hands in crowded department stores. Easier said than done, for a small child's hand, once it wishes to be released, becomes as hard to grasp as running water. But done it must be. Even the constantly watched child falls into trouble; what could happen to the unwatched one doesn't bear thinking about.

rejected. All I wanted was a very small gas supply laid on between the nearby street and my new, gasless flat, so that I might enjoy the pleasure of high speed gas dinners. I should say here that my flat is not in the middle of a field but on a main toad whose pavements cover hundreds of gas pipes. The gasman said that he couldn't see his way to supplying me with any gas in the foreseeable future.

He also said that in New York, the gas companies had refused to take on any more customers. He said this with a certain amount of relish. I considered writing to the British Gas Corporation, enclosing an impressive CV and testimonials from my bank manager and editor which vouched for my suitability as a consumer. It seemed like a lot of trouble, so in the end I rang up the electricity board and they sent someone round to connect me up right away.

Evidence of a return to Victorian values, perhaps, with the news that the Boosey Ballad Concerts, which ended 52 years ago after an unbroken run since 1867, are to be revived in October at the Wigmore Hall. The original Boosey concerts were held nearby at the Queens Hall, destroyed in the blitz, and featured such immortal artists as Dame Clara Butt. Count John McCormack and the violinist Mischa Elman. While the names on the programme have inevitably changed, the content will remain much the same: Robert White is to sing Come into the Garden Maud and Abide with Me (first played at a Boosey concert by its composer. Samuel Liddle long before the first Cup Final); Fenella Fielding will offer Oh, No John, and Brian Johnston will read amusing cricket poems. The proceeds will benefit the NSPCC.

Mongoose repos

It is not every day that even I have lunch with a woman who lived with a mongoose for 10 years. Having done so, I have learned a thing or two about the species. The mongoose, which lived with its mistress in Islington, was in the habit of clinging to her bra-strap while she cooked, poking its inquisitive snout at the pots and pans to see what was going on, as mongooses like to do at all times. It was ferocious in defence of its territory (the back garden), where geraniums throve over the carcasses of neighbours' cats foolish enough to venture there. They would be buried in the dead of night to avoid reprisals. The mongoose liked a raw egg for breakfast, which it would eat only from a copy of the The Times, on which it would subsequently relieve itself. Other papers would not do but would be shredded in a fury. The main meal of the day was freshly dead rabbit with the fur on, which necessitated a special arrangement at Smithfield. We dined on fresh salmon and boeuf

Underdrive

I am, I suspect, one of many who read the various Consumers' Association publications hopefully but to little effect. Their prose is clear enough, and the authors write exhaustively about their subjects, but seldom leave an obvious answer - in my tiny mind, at least - to the unending query, Which? But in Approaching Retirement, to be published next month, a question! I have long pondered is answered entirely to my satisfaction: what is the point of the diminishing returns of car ownership when you can hire a car cheaply whenever you need one? Answer, it is cheaper to hire if you drive 4,000 miles a year or less, although the CA offers no explanation of its calculation.

And this piggy . . .

The Norwegians have come up with an ingenious variation on the games travellers play in their efforts to dispose of un-exchangeable coins on their way out of the country. In the departure lounge at Bergen airport squats an enormous ceramic piggy hank. A hand-lettered sign forthrightly announces: "I have a big belly. I can eat any small coin. Then I give them to aid for mentally-inflicted children." Travellers love it.

Warty the species (the Pigs and Pec-caries Specialist Group of the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources Species Survival Commission) call it familiarly a "wart". Its meat is good to eat and leaner than ordinary pork, but since the humans with whom it shares its habitat tend to be Muslims it is most often persecuted as a pest. Full face it is so ugly that few have ever bothered to photograph it, and few of those photographs are reproducible in a family newspaper. Its habits are largely unknown, but presumed to be disgusting. I quite like it. PHS

Will Reagan really run again?

There are few pleasanter places in the United States at present than Santa Barbara, where President Reagan is on holiday at his mountain-top ranch. There the sky seems to be perpetually blue and the days have none of the oppressive mugginess of Washington at this ranch time of year. The Sierras glisten in the sunlight, and the Pacific Ocean, should the President decide to take a dip, is unusually warm this year. But as Reagan relaxes, he will be concentrating on the most important personal decision he must take this year: should he seek a second presidential term? Judging from remarks made by most of his close aides, he has already virtually made up his mind to do so, and will keep Vice-President George Bush as his running mate. Certainly the Democrats believe they will be confronting Reagan again, which is why Senator John Glenn, considered to have the best chance of defeating him, has been steadily gaining on the Demoratic front-runner, Walter Mondale. Some people in Washington admittedly a small minority - still believe Reagan will not stand again. They variously cite his age (he would be 78 by the time his second term ended), his poor hearing, and the fact that next year's campaign is likely to be very tough and not the walkover which many Republicans were predicting a few months ago.

"Nancy factor". The belief that Mrs Reagan would prefer her husband to bow out while his reputation is high and his health robust so he could enjoy the final years of his life in undisturbed retirement at their

This must be a tempting prospect for Reagan as he contemplates his future, for he is now uncomfortably aware of the difficult battles that would lie ahead if he were re-elected.

Republican leaders are among the first to admit they can no longer contemplate a victory of similar proportions to the one Reagan achieved in 1980, let alone on the scale of Mrs Thatcher's landslide. For a start, the Democrats are not in the same disarray as Labour was under Michael Foot. After two years of demoralizing dissension following the nation's rejection of Carterism, the party is starting to display a new cutting edge and an ability to expose and exploit weaknesses in the President's armour. The Democrats now look like a viable opposition rather than a collection of feuding special interest groups.

More important, however, is the President's declining reputation among various key constituencies.
Although the trade unions have traditionally supported the Democratic Party, hundreds of thousands of blue-collar workers voted for Reagan in 1980. Many have now showed their intention of switching back again, blaming Reagan for high ductions in social benefits.

The AFL-CIO is to endorse a candidate for the first time in its history. The organization's choice will almost certainly be Mondale; it definitely will not be Reagan. Whoever is chosen will benefit from a big injection of funds and extensive organizational support from union activists. The President's biggest headache is over women. He was rudely reminded of the "gender gap" last week when one of his own appointees, Barbara Honegger, resigned as head of a task force looking into sexually discriminating legislation, claiming that the President's alternative programme to the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA)

Republican and private polisters have shown that women tend to disapprove of Reagan in far greater numbers than men, a trend that threatens his chances of carrying some key southern states.

Then there are the blacks and Hispanics. Both groups, with the exception of Hispanics of Cuban origins, are traditional Democratic supporters but their registration and turnout as voters has been low. But a registration drive among the two communities, fuelled by the wide-spread belief that they have been ignored by an administration which favours big business and the wealthy, could produce millions of new Democratic voters.

Reagan's desence policies, particu-larly his plans to beef up America's nuclear defences, are also causing him problems with an electorate which is increasingly concerned about the dangers of nuclear war.

President Reagan's strongest card is the economy. Inflation has been slashed since he came to office, production is rising and the economy seems set on a path of renewed growth. Nevertheless, some of his advisers, as well as independent economists, believe the good economic news may have come too early. By next year growth may be more singgish. Voters will have become accustomed to low inflation but will still be deeply conscious of what is expected to be a continued high level of unemployment.

Reagan does at least have the luxury of not having to fight off rivals for the Republican nomination. If he does decide to run it is expected he will be the first incumbent since General Eisenhower in 1956 not to have to contest a

The Republican Party and Reagan's own advisers are acutely aware of this, which is why they seem so determined to push him into seeking another term. If Reagan runs again the Republicans will have a good chance of retaining control of the White House even though they may lose their present majority in the Senate. If he does not, they risk losing the White House as well.

Wanted, a saviour for St Asbestos

Gavin Stamp on the future of a redundant church suffering from a fashionable health hazard

Redundant churches are not a new problem. York and Norwich are full of medieval churches that have found new uses or are simply preserved as the venerable monuments they are. The demolition of such familar and ancient buildings is generally regarded as unacceptable.

Georgian and Victorian churches also become redundant, especially if areas. Here the chances of survival are lower but the Church of England has a machinery which is employed to try and find alternative uses for the building if it is of architectural significance. Standing in Brighton, however, is a redundant church which is proving to be a special and very difficult case: it is a church built so recently that many can see no virtue in it, and it is also affected by the latest fashionable health

The church is that dedicated to St Wilfrid in suburban Elm Grove, which was consecrated exactly 50 years ago in 1933. The building is constructed of brick and concrete, with much more of the former than of the latter, and is a very subtle design by a most subtle and strange architect, H. S. Goodhart-Rendel. Rendel is often thought of principally as a writer about Victorian architecture, and St Wilfrid's is full of references to the mid-Victorian Gothic Revival churches he admired so much, but he was also a clever and individualistic designer.

Most new churches of the 1920s and 1930s - and there are many that are very fine - were built in new suburbs. It was the peculiar tragedy of St Wilfrid's to be built in a small parish and in a town which is embarrassingly well stocked with magnificent churches. St Wilfrid's was clearly a building which the Church of England quite reasonably would choose first for closure, and in 1980 it was declared redundant. Under the Church of England's Pastoral Measure of 1968, a redundant church enjoys a "waiting period" of three years while alternative uses are sought for it.

This year the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches was faced with a difficult decision: either to vest St Wilfrid's in the Redundant Churches Fund - which simply preserves the very best churches as monuments - or to authorize its demolition. Fortunately, the Board did neither and recommended that more time and effort is necessary to find an appropriate new use for it. St Wilfrid's is, in fact, a much more practical proposition for alternative uses than most Anglican churches. It has an uncluttered and well lit interior not encumbered by special fittings and, being so modern, it also has facilities like lavatories. Many bodies did approach the diocese with proposals for rebuilding, but all have been deterred by the apparent high cost of St Wilfrid's is not falling down, but it does need repair, including complete repointing. The real problem, however, is much more uncertain. Like most architects, Goodhart-Rendel used new materials which do not always survive the test of time. To ensure that the acoustics were satisfactory, he sprayed the ceiling with a special ter made of glue and asbestos. Unfortunately, asbestos has now become an emotive, if not hysterical disintegrates and is breathed in. No "air test" has been taken in St Wilfrid's to see if the ceiling does in fact have to be dealt with. Removal of the offending plaster will certainly be expensive, but possibly it would be perfectly harmless sealed in by paint. It would be tragic if mere unfounded suspicion of a health risk should doom the building to Another problem is that common condition in Britain: "Antiquarian Prejudice." St Wilfrid's is not "old". so many people cannot conceive that it could be a building of any interest. This blinkered prejudice has condemned many fine buildings to oblivion. Once it was thought that architecture ended in 1714 - the date when the Royal Commission on Historical Monuments ended its survey - so that not only Victorian but even Georgian buildings were regarded as of no interest. Today it is architecture of the period of St Wilfrid's which is suffering from ignorance and prejudice.

Sir John Betjeman has said there is little doubt that "St Wilfrid's is about the best Thirties church there is. That it should be demolished is unthinkable".

One problem, perhaps, with St Wilfrid's is that it is such a very clever building. It is not easily labelled; it is neither "Modern" nor "Traditionalist" and it sports none of the familiar visual cliches of "Art Deco" or of International Modern. In the very polarized architectural politics of his time, Goodhart-Ren-del tried to find an intelligent subject. Many people assume that the mere presence of asbestos in a building is a danger to health. In fact, it is dangerous only when it and the safe, sentimental conservatism of many church architects.

That is what makes St Wilfrid's so very impressive, for it is unasha-medly modern in its use of concrete and in its certain austerity of mood yet in the modelling of its beautiful exterior brickwork it is full of resonances of buildings of the past but without using a single pointed Gothic arch. .

A report pi conservation societies, SAVE Britain's Heritage and the Thirties Society, suggests that the estimate for repair secured by the Diocese of Chichester - £120,000 - may be much too high, and it is this estimate which has deterred many potential users. It also points out that, when there is a will, redundant churches in a much more precarious state than St Wilfrid's can be saved. It is sadiy typical of the lack of communication between all the interested anthorities concerned with redundant churches that the Historic Buildings Council of the Department of the Environment have not been asked if it might contribute to the repair of the building.

If money can be found for repairs and to deal with the asbestos plaster, then it will become a practical proposition for re-use. One very real possibility for its future is as a store for the Brighton Museum and Art Gallery, whose collections are particularly strong in the period when St Wilfrid's was designed.

Emergency, ward them off

I have just, somewhat belatedly, discovered a (to me) new, highly miented winer of detective fiction, Robert Barnard, and have avidly been catching up on his past output. In Blood Brotherhood, set in an international religious symposium held in Yorkshire, a British cleric gives way to uncharitable thoughts about an overseas delegate: "A tall, weighty young man, over-scrubbed, probably American, thought the bishop, or worse, Canadian.

After nearly two weeks touring Canada, I can see what the bishop meant. A high proportion of Canadians appear to match their attractive and agreeable country in seem gleamingly healthy. However, Canadians, like everybody else, fall sick from time to time and when they do they can avail themselves of publicly-financed medicare services provided by their country's provincial governments. Budgets, inevitably, are tight. The general secretary of the Ontario Medical Association alleges that price has become the sole criterion determining health care needs.

However, certain groups of people, radiant with public spirit, are generously offering to help to solve the problem. Private companies are seeking to involve themselves massively in health provision. They argue that they can manage Canadian hospitals more efficiently than the public sector, providing satisfactory care at less

Such claims will no doubt cause a pricking up of ears in Mrs Thatch-er's cabinet. Ministers in our Tory government are anxious, as they put it, to roll back the frontiers of the state. That objective applies to the social services as well as to industry. social services as well as to initially.

If this can be achieved while simultaneously cutting public expenditure and with no detriment to service standards, then any transatlantic experiments may speedily be emulated in Britain. The hidden manifesto can be taken off the shelf, dusted down and implemented; and at the same time the Government will be able to assert that Conservatives are actually more reliable guardians of the National Health Service than the old-fashioned stickin-the-mud socialists.

Certainly, Canadian exponents of private management are ebullient about what they promise to provide. Mr Harold Livergaut, president of a Toronto company called Extendi-care, declarer "I don't think that I'm doing anything that is sinful. I deliver good care and I spend less of society's money than would otherwise be spent because I'm extremely

However, evidence from the United States, where private hospital management has been operating for some years, challenges such confidence. A recent sindy pub-lished in the New England Journal of Medicine concludes that money-making hospital chains are more expensive than their mon-profit counterparts and that they do not take care of sick people any more efficiently. Indeed, it is contended that administrative expenses have actually increased.

it all sounds uncannily like experience to date of privatization of local authority services in Britain. Fanfares announce that overmanned workforces will be reduced with the residual operatives better paid, that inadequate street cleaning or garbage collection will suddenly be transformed into a model of promptitude and reliability, and that there will be vast savings for the ratepayers into attractive and agreeable country in the being almost alarmingly neatly turned out. In addition, they seem gleamingly healthy. However, canadians, like everybody else, fall ment and overtaxed ratepayers look back with nostalgia to what they had hoped to regard as the bad old days. in at least one case, suspicion of financial mismanagement has led to calls for an extraordinary andit.

MR BEGIN'S EMPTY CHAIR

During the six years that Mr Menachem Begin has been prime minister of Israel, his departure from that office has been frequently and heartily desired by most of the foreign leaders who have had to deal with him, from the President of the United States down. The outside world in general has seen him as a very obstinate man whose determination to incor-porate the West Bank of the Jordan and the Gaza Strip into Israel has thwarted any hope that the Sadat initiative would develop into a general Arab-Israeli peace, while his obsession with the threat to Israel's security from the Palestine Liberation Organization has led to the devastation of much of Lebanon and to Israel's seemingly inextricable embroilment there.

 $\langle \beta_i \rangle_{\alpha_{ij}^{m}}$

Had Mr Begin not become prime minister in 1977 President Carter would have had higher hopes of reaching an overall ctilement through a resumed Ceneva Peace Conference. Had he not been prime minister in 19 3 President Sadat might have obtained at Camp David a formula more encouraging to other potential Arab negotiators. Had, he been defeated in the 1981 election President Reagan might have had a better chance of reviving the Egyptian-Israeli autonomy talks. Had he not been in office in 1982 Israel would probaby not have invaded Lebankn. Had he left office even last artumn the Reagan Plan might have been taken more scriously both in Israel and the Arab world.

Welshall never know. For the tact if that at none of those junctifres was Mr Begin prepared to refign. Nor were his Israeli electors willing to dispense with his hervices when given the opportunity to do so. Israel is as it is, which is not always as others would like it to be. For the last six years Israel has been represented, in the full sense of that word, by Mr Begin.

If yesterday's announcement means what it says, that he has now decided to quit, that must reflect, at least in part, his own conviction that the fundamental choices he has made on Israel's behalf are no longer in any serious danger of being reversed. In major matters he has had his way. Israel now holds the strategic initiative in the region. He bas that cause for satisfaction.

That does not mean he is bowing out in triumph. On the contrary, the last 12 months have brought a series of trials and reverses which, by all accounts, have soured the fruits of office in Mr Begin's mouth. No doubt the worst for him, on the purely personal level, was the death of his wife Aliza last November. Without her, he has visibly lost much of the verve which formerly characterized his political style. And the timing of the loss was bad. The war in Lebanon had severely damaged Israel's world reputation, and soon after Mrs Begin's death, in February of this year, Mr Begin's government and he personally as prime minister, were publicly censured by a commission of inquiry which a massive movement of Israeli public opinion had obliged them to set up to establish responsibility for the Sabra-Chatila massacre.

In the ensuing crisis, passions were aroused to the point where Israeli government is likely to some normally sober Israelis spoke of the danger of civil war, and indeed one Israeli demonstrator was killed by his immediate difference who his fellow citizens. Mr Begin successor is.

weathered that storm; in a sense it even raised his stature since his personality was seen as one of the few forces still holding the country together. But the summer has seen his government's popularity slipping away, as Israeli soldiers continued to die in Lebanon and the economy staggered into a crisis that even the enormous subsidy Israel receives from the United States cannot wholly disguise. The latter issue may be more important to the majority of Israelis, but the former is especially traumatic for Mr Begin, who undoubtedly Begin, believed when he sanctioned the invasion of Lebanon, that it would protect Jewish lives, and who has let it be known that the 24 hour vigil outside his residence, exhibiting the growing death toll, causes him intense personal distress.

For all that, one cannot easily imagine Mr Begin deciding to resign if he felt his policies were under great pressure - if, for instance, the Reagan Plan were still being actively canvassed. But clearly that is not so. The Arabs, having failed to exploit the moment of opportunity which last year's Israeli blunders offered them, the Reagan administration has now abandoned any serious effort to persuade Israel to keep the West Bank available as a Palestinian homeland. No such effort can now be expected before the United States presidential election in November 1984, and by then so many Israelis will be living in the West Bank that no contemplate withdrawing from it. Mr Begin can afford to retire. For it no longer makes any

THE MANTLE OF LUTHER KING

The American House of Representatives recently approved a bill declaring the Monday nearcst January 15 a federal public boliday in commemoration of Martin Luther King, the black Lader assassinated in Memphis 'n 1968. It promises to pass swiftly through the Senate when the Congress reassembles. President Reagan has had deep, and proper, misgivings about elevating Dr King to the company of George Washington, who also endows one of the scarce American public holidays. But now the White House indicates the President would be likely to sign the bill into law. The season for electoral gestures is open, heralded by the overtures the President is now making towards women. Hispanics and all the others the pollsters tell him need attention if he is to run again.

The real concern of many black Americans is about food stamps and welfare programmes and the speed of economic recovery when they, as ever, are at the back of the queue for jobs. But for Black leaders, as for the President, symbols count. The re-creation on Saturday of the 1963 civil rights march on Washington D.C. was a good example of a theatrical gesture unlinked to the Congressional committees and compromised coalitions which secure legislative change in the United States.

Twenty years ago Dr King vividly described both a dream and a shopping list of electoral and anti-discrimination laws. Today, with many of the reforms attained, the marchers' agenda for practical action is vague beyond a claim for additional black representation, and a complaint that the President's money-saving measures hit the poor hardest.

Mr Jesse Jackson, the leading claimant to Dr King's mantle, says plausibly enough that blacks merely want "parity" in their number becoming sheriff, number catcher. But any aspirant for the highest federal office, the presidency, must stand for something in addition to himself or his skin colour. Mr Jackson has been silent on the fiscal facts of life, on defence, or how the aiready extravagant federal budget deficit would be inflated by the additional social spending he presumably wants for the cities. As a contender for the Democratic nomination his candidacy (yet to be formally announced and still being urgently debated among black leaders) would be merely symbolic.

And of what? Next month Mr Jackson promises to cross the Atlantic, though his announced itinerary - the Soviet Union and black American solders based in Germany - hardly makes it a European trip. It might, how-ever, make the stuff of his presidential bid more apparent. On present evidence there are all too many signs (which few American preachers fail to exhibit) of Elmer Gantry. Beside, say, Mr Benjamin Hooks of the civil rights old guard or even Mr Andrew Young, mayor of Atlanta and President Carter's undiplomatic ambassador to the

the American black's new electoral potency, a late-gathered fruit of the voting rights reforms secured by Dr King's campaigning and President Lyndon Johnson's politics. Blacks are not alone in sensing the potential of voter registration drives; the entire Democratic camp has been alerted in recent years by the success of the mainly Republican "political action committees", and its regiments in the labour unions and the ethnic communities are mobilizing. Mr Jackson has put himself at the head of an electoral campaign which could see black votes deciding both primaries and the presidency in several states and many cities. He is a power in the land or, as he put it in the inimitable American way: "If the party is forthcoming I'd put jet fuel in my butt. If it's not, I'd sit on it."

But for what policies and for which convincing presidential candidate are those theoretical electoral margins to be used? Surely they are too valuable to be wasted on a divisive run by Mr Jackson for the sake of "blackness". The political maturity of the black leadership in an era far removed from the heady days of the 1960s will be tested as it now considers trading those votes for Mr Jackson's symbolism or, under tried and trusted convention, offering them to Mr Walter Mondale or Mr John Glenn for the rewards of a traditional black and white Democrat coalition.

'AND MAY THE BETTER YACHT WIN'

Now that the dispute over eligibility has been put out of the way, there seems an even chance that the contest for the America's Cup may be settled where it should be, on the water. It is not reasonable in the nature of things to hope for an end to the protests, gamesmanship and tactical leaks, because such devices are integral to the character of the affair. But now that the New York Yacht Club has handsomely if belatedly conceded in the words above that the two remaining challengers are the genuine article, the saltwater tipsters laying odds on which of them will meet Courageous or Liberty will be able to ease the odds on an outcome in which applause may outweigh recriminations. Not that recriminations ever seem to have done the contest much harm in the past. The greater the rancour, the more fiercely the defeated have burned to expunge it with a fresh challenge. Until the 1970's the rules still enabled the defenders to act in some degree as judges in their own cause: and since the fear of being the first to lose the trophy has acted on every generation of American yachts-temptation to take advantage of that position was often hard to resist. But by now the rules are fair, and ideas of what is acceptable in international sport are more cut and dried. A continued attempt by the NYYC to seek to rule out vessels that the competent authorities had declared acceptable within the 12-metre rule might well have caused future challengers to conclude that whatever happened they would never be allowed to win. That would be a pity, both because there is some worthwhile technological spin-off from the millions lavished on the Cup. and because it retains an inexplicable public appeal. There can hardly be an international sporting event which arouses so much interest while apparently so little calculated to entertain an audience. The huge and specialized vessels, with a different sail to meet every slightest nuance of the wind and enough electronic gadgetry to guide a space shuttle are far removed from the kind of boats that even the minority who sail can ever hope to be familiar with. Of all kinds of yacht racing - never a sport that lends itself to men with an obsessive force, the the interests of speciators - 12metre match racing is perhaps the dullest to watch, and the most apt to turn into a procession whose subtleties are virtually impalpable to the necessarily distant onlooker. It is partly the glamour of money, no doubt, and nostalgia for the ghosts of the yachts which used to compete for the Cup when a 12-metre was regarded as modest in size. But the main reason for the appeal of the Cup is that in spite of all the spending, gadgetry, rule-chop-ping, gossip and ballyhoo, it remains extremely simple in the last resort. Not all the technology in the world can save a helmsman from throwing the whole effort away by a momentary tactical error. Not even the most up-to-date of necromancy can enable him to anticipate and avoid being confounded by some whim of the wind as it bloweth where it listeth. And if it listeth not to blow at all (not an uncommon event in Rhode Island Sound in the summer), the immaculate hulls, finelydrilled crews, and all that skill, wealth and enthusiasm can provide, will have to sit and wait provide, will have to sit and wait present. There is, however, a casters would endorse your opinion to see whether it will come back. Statement about BBC religious that ITV's proposal to move

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Step by step to alternative medicine

From Professor D. J. Weatherall, FRS

Sir. Your leader (August 10) and recent articles on alternative forms of medical treatment present a disturbing and not entirely accurate picture of modern scientific medical cinc. You argue that the medical profession disregards the personal cinc. You argue that the medical profession disregards the personal factor in disease and is unwilling to even consider the possibility that unconventional forms of therapy may have a role to play in clinical prostice.

The notion that scientific medi-cine has lost sight of the individual patient in a cloud of high technology is widely accepted by those who have never worked or been a patient in a modern hospital. But what is the evidence that this is true?

I have worked in teaching hospitals for 20 years and have observed a major change in attitude to patient care, particularly among younger doctors and medical stu-dents. Of course they are interested in disease. But, unlike many of their predecessors, they are increasingly aware of the pastoral aspects of their work and of the importance of their patients as individuals with personal and environmental problems.

I wish that those who are constantly criticising the attitudes of the medical profession would spend a day with me in the company of some of our younger doctors; they might be surprised to learn that a great deal more time is spent on sorting out the patient's personal problems than on the application of high technology medicine. In fact, medical science has taught us how completely ignorant we are about most disease processes and hence has underlined the importance of patients' individual reactions to their diseases.

in turn, this is creating, a sense of humility among our younger doc-tors; arrogance and disinterest in patients as individuals may still exist but it is much less common than it was some years ago. In one sense, modern scientific medicine is suffering from the speed of its own development. In the short period since the Second World War we have seen the emergence of antibiotics, modern anaesthesia, the prevention of many killing diseases such as smallpox, poliomyelitis and many crippling genetic disorders, for example, advanced cancer, some forms of heart and rheumatic disease, and psychosomatic disorders were not going to be controlled immediately by new advances in medical science there was a natural tendency among an increasingly demanding public to look to alternate forms of treatment.

Why has the medical profession not rushed to accept these new approaches? Simply because no competent doctor ever accepts a new form of treatment without a careful period of evaluation.

There is nothing intrinsically wrong with any of the alternative forms of treatment described in your articles (August 8. 9, 10). There is no reason why they should not be widely used for patients who cannot be helped by accepted forms of treatment. Equally, there is no reason why any of these approaches should not be properly evaluated by well established scientific methods. Of course modern biological science cannot explain everything, but it is totally illogical to discard scientific method for this reason, just as it is ridiculous to say that modern medicine has failed because it has not yet found a cure for cancer or rheumatism.

Your leader totally disregards the fact that the real successes of modern medicine are, in the main, based on a solid foundation of work in the basic sciences. All we ask is that, for the sake of our patients, the methods of alternate medicine rigorously examined. What you call the medical establishment is cautious, but I doubt if you will find the younger members of the profession as rigid or uninterested in exploring new areas of clinical practice as you suggest.

Yours faithfully, D. J. WEATHERALL, Nuffield Professor of Clinical Medicine. University of Oxford.

View of Chad

From Mr Michael Brothwood Sir, Your leading article, "Eating people is wrong" (August 16) which, closer inspection reveals, deals with the subject of Chad, follows upon two earlier leading articles on that subject headed respectively "French headache in Chad" (July 11) and resist the BBC's proposals", it positively endorsed the move from opm to 10.15pm because the later placing was in the mainstream of Sunday evening output with a strong inheritance of viewers from the mass appeal programmes which preceded it.

Threat to Sutton Hoo burial site

From Mr Nigel A. Kerr Sir. A year ago you published a report of the proposed excavation of the Anglo-Saxon royal burial site at Sutton Hoo. Suffolk. Since then work has begun on surveys in advance of excavation and digging is scheduled to start in due course.

In view of the forthcoming establishment in April, 1984, of the Ancient Monuments Commission, it is pertinent to ask whether it will look favourably upon the projected excavation, although the final decision will still rest with the Secretary of State for the Environment under the provisions of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

More particularly, it is necessary to ask whether the excavation should go ahead at all. The site, a group of burial mounds, some of them probably containing rich graves like the ship burial dug in 1939, is legally protected in per-petuity; whilst fears have been expressed about the threats from "treasure hunters" with metal detectors, the principal danger would seem to be posed archaeologists themselves.

It is axiomatic that all excavation is destruction: accordingly the total or near-total excavation proposed will have a correspondingly damaging effect on this unique site. Coupled with this, it is evident that techniques of non-destructive site analysis have advanced significantly during the past decade and are likely to do so in the future.

What is the justification for the excavation: what questions must be answered now rather than in the

At present permission has only been granted for non-destructive survey of the site, which everyone must support. The crunch will come with the next stage of the work, when the Scaretary of State must decide whether to permit the excavation and concomitant destruction of the site; he must search his conscience thoroughly. Equally he must treat his external advisers with circumspection.

The Society of Antiquaries of London, among other bodies, supports the project and hence he must not allow any offence against natural justice by permitting archaeologists to be judge and jury in their own case.

For the Sutton Hoo excavation raises broader issues which were very much in mind when the first Ancient Monuments Act was passed in 1882. I can do no better than to remind you of the words of William Morris, who helped to stimulate public awareness of our national heritage at the time:

These...do not belong to us only. They belonged to our forefathers and will belong to our descendants unless we play them false... We are only the trustees for those who will come after us.

These comments applied to the generality of historic buildings, some of which are legally protected as ancient monuments; they apply a fortiori to a site of the undoubted significance of Sutton Hoo. Are chaeological excavation is total destruction. Unlike endangered species, historic sites cannot reproduce themselves.

Hardek's 'surrender'

From Mr Marek Garciecki Sir, With reference to your report (August 24) on the "surrender" of Mr Wiadyslaw Hardek to the police, should like to make some important points. In our view this news item was not put in its proper context. We know, for instance, that as recently as July 28 Mr Hardek signed a document issued by the TKK /Solidarity's underground leadership calling for workers to celebrate the anniversary on August 31 with a two-hour boycott of public transport. This appeal was repeated in carly August, stressing that the TKK's fight continues. It therefore seems highly improbable that the man who signed this document less than a month ago should have such an abrupt change of heart. Is it not more likely that he was induced to come out of hiding and make a statement by some form of severe pressure having been put on him? We are only too familiar with the Polish authorities' methods in that respect.

In addition, his statement on television was worded in such a way that we believe it was not written by him. Again, it is likely that it was drawn up by representatives of the authorities. We should also point out that Mr Hardek's appearance on television does not make the occasion genuine, since it is well known that film has been falsified before - not least on the occasion when Lech Walesa was supposed to have been talking to General

Jaruzelski.
The Polish government is waging a propaganda war against Solidarity, using fabricated items of news. This is a classic example of such use of propaganda, and unfortunately Western media seem to have

Nazi Germany, culminating in the signing of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Uncalatable issues, such as Stalin's purges raised by Khrushchev, or the Katyn Wood murders, or the systematic attempts to Russify the Baltic states, are all topics the Soviet authorities would not have us discuss. To the long list of Latvian deporters of the 1940s mentioned in Mr Levin's article we would like to add the names of but a few Latvians who have more recently suffered at the hands of the Soviets for daring to give expression to their national aspirations: Bumeisters, Juris: Calius. Ints: Doronina. Lidija: Freimanis, Gunars; Lismanis, Dainis; Melngailis, Gederts; Ravins, Maigo-nis; Rode, Gunars; Rozkains, Janis;

Veveris, Janis. Mr Dubrovsky's use of a quotation by one elderly citizen clearly does not murror the feelings of the majority of the Latvian nation.

It has been conducted by the Canterbury Archaeological Trust with the archaeological work being carried out by Mr Tim Tatton-Brown, the trust's research by Mrs Margaret Sparks, and the drafting of the plans by Mr John Bowen. The survey was financed by the Friends of Canterbury - Cathedral and commissioned by the Dean and Chapter.

The most dramatic discovery, that of Lanfranc's hall, built about 1075 and demol ished early in the nineteenthcentury, has placed it some distance to the south of the later medieval Great Hall, the remains of which were recorded and excavated last year (The Times, November 25, 1982).

Other unexpected survivals include a series of magnificent late-medieval timber roofs, including one in the building known as Meister Omers of the mid-fifteenth century, a king-strut roof in the bakehouse of thirteenth-century date, and a roof of about 1200 with secret notched lap joints still in place over the old monastic larder.

Football opens with the promise of better things on the pitch and familiar threats off it

Goals and Nicholas bring sweetness to a day soured by hooliganism

Comfort and dismay greeted the new football season hand in hand. Goals were up, crowds were down and hooligans stayed where they usually are in trouble. Those on the pitch, where it matters most after all, are responding by performing more attractively but the game must accept that its product is no longer, and perhaps never will be, such a dominant force in the domestic market. Saturday's 119 goals, 37 of which were scored in such a dominant force in the domestic market.

Saturday's 119 goals, 37 of which were scored in the first division alone, was nine higher than on the corresponding day last season and the total then went on to be the biggest for 15 years. Early indications they may be, but encouraging ones nevertheless. So in the general move towards sending three rather than two forwards into the land of adventure. They took it almost too far at Villa Park, where Ormsby, a defender in his first league appearance for 16 months, added the seventh and decisive goal after the interval, and at Vicarage Road, where half of Watford's four ended up in their own net. Christie, of Notis County, gained an early lead in the first division's individual list by claiming three at Leicester.

Yet for a public turning increasingly to other

Yet for a public turning increasingly to other weekend pastimes, the change may have come too late. Last season's overall attendance, which dropped to under 18m, started with a figure of almost 500,000 spectators. Saturday's gate, under 495,000, was the lowest recorded on opening day, although the first division again was watched by a

One answer for those whos turnstiles are growing rustier is to acquire a so-called star, a character, a crowd-puller. The pity is that few exist, the problem for managers is that even fewer are available for transfer and the setback for all but the richest clubs is that fewer still can afford them. Only three, for instance, made bids for Charlie Nicholas, Scotland's new crown prince. He chose Arsenal above Liverpool and Manchester United, although he was persuaded to leave Wolverhamp-ton Wanderers, where he was on trial as a 15-year old, by a gang of hooligans who attacked him. The tee was a hefty £750,000 but Arsenal are already benefiting from his presence.

The attendance at Highbury was close to 40,000, the second highest of the day and a rise of 50 per cent on last season's average. In one afternoon Arsenal have recouped an estimated £50,000. Nor was that all. Nicholas stirs the audience. As Terry Neill, his manager, says: "You expect something to happen every time he is on the ball."

With a theatrical touch, Nicholas's 10 colleagues emerged first from the wings to receive applause that was moderate in comparison to the ovaion that marked his entrance. He admitted that he was relieved to climb out of the bright glare of publicity on to a stage where he feels more comfortable. The spotlight was still aimed primarily at him.

Walsh, Luton Town's diminutive forward who played in all three of England's matches in Australia, threatened to steal the show. At one stage he successfully took on the whole of Arsenal's defence, only for O'Leary to clear his cross off the line and it was his break five minutes before the interval that applied pressure on Robson, who beat his own goalkeeper. A facial injury and a twisted ankle foreshortened both Walsh's and Luton's contribution.

Woodcock, too, refused to stay hidden in the chorus line. He headed Arsenal into the lead midway through the first half when Nicholas's run took out three defenders and Davis as left free at the byline. After 50 minutes Woodstock, brought down by Donaghy inside the area, would have won a penalty had McDermott's opportunism not rendered it unnecessary.

Rix, Arsenal's new captain, was also prominent, not least for twice hitting a post with long-distance drives. So was Jennings for a couple of typically neat saves from Moss and Stein near the end. By then, Highbury was singing the praises of one individual. Had Nicholas scored, his first appearance would have been complete.

Although he was credited with $1 goals last season at Celtic, the same number curiously enough that Luton conceded away from home, it is optimistic to expect him to achieve even half of that sum south of the border. But the attention be receives in the months ahead is sure to be to Woodcock's benefit.

David Pleat. Luton's manager, remarked that the crowd had "really come to see the opposition," a joke tinged with truth. It was only after deciding to tighten up their defence that they lost their way last season. Now that Stein, not fully fit on Saturday. is back, they can again rely on their main strength, their attractive attack.

The most unattractive incident occurred seven miles away from a stadium. Some 236 of Birmingham City's supporters were arrested after several innocent passers-by. Why not, in the name of heaven, order each one of the troublemakers to report to a local police station in the middle of every Saturday afternoon for the rest of the season? No one will miss them.

_lverpoo!... It is always embarrassing to lose the first match of the season to a newly promoted club and that looked to be Liverpool's fate at halftime on Saturday. However, in the second half there was an extra spring in the stride of the League champions as they began to put their game together and it was Wolverhampton Wanderers who were relieved to bear the final Goals may not have been as plentiful here as at Villa Park, Upton Park, Filbert Street and shoringe of entertainment. Apart from a host of near misses, mostly by Liverpool, there was some imaginative football from both teams which augurs well for the next nine months.

A large crowd, an immaculate pitch and blazing sunshine greeted the players but the outlook was decidedly cloudy for Liverpool as Wolves proceeded to score the quickest goal of the day. Eves, allowed to scamper clear by a square Liverpool defence, had his effort parned by Grobbelaar. The ball rebounded to Gray but he was at a difficult angle and there was no need for Kennedy to trip him. Palmer

In the second half, though Liverpool struck even earlier than Wolves had in the first. Souness at last freed Rush from the shackles of Pender and Dodd with a delightful pass through the middle and Rush scored superbly. From then on Liverpool played more purposefully, Dalglish and Rush his the har within seconds of each other and Wolves goalkeeper. Hastings let their slip away

By Michael Berry Hastings and St Leonard's Priory Hastings and St Leonard's Priory joined a growing list of sides to have surrendered winning postions at Lord's when they were beaten by Shrewsbury in the final of the National Club Championship sponsored by William Younger on sored by william foldinger on Saturday.

After a dominant all-round display had brought victory to within their reach, the men from Susses, let the game slip away in the finish that must rank with the best seen on the ground. Shrewsbury had been put in on losing the toss and on a wicket that offered little appreciable assistance to batsmen or howers.

Skipper Steve Gale hit a patient 53 that spanned thirty-one overs and Ian Hutchinson, an eighteenyear-old fresh out of school, supported him with 36 but the Salopians never fully capitalized on Salopians never fully capitalized on a ridiculous short boundary on the Mound side. They were restricted by tight early bowling and some athletic Hastings fielding. The Burnett brothers. Robin and Richard, grandsons of the late Frank Woolley both claimed three wickets and although Shrewsbury's 191 for 9 total off 45 overs was their second highest of the season in the competition, it always gave a general feeling of inadequacy.

when Tim Booth Jones, one of only two players on show to bave played at Lord's before, steered Hastings to 162 for three by the end of the 37th over. Shrewsbury's worst fears were beginning to be realized. With only 30 needed off eight overs, and with seven wickets in hand, l'astings were on course for a comfortable win.

Remarkably, though, Shrewabury remarkany, though, Shrewaldry furned the game on its head. Dave Williamson, their fifth bowler, removed the danger of the Booth Jones brothers, the bespectacled Tim going for a splendid 85, and Hastings began an inexplicable panie.

The Shrewsbury fielding, at best slovedly beforehand, suddenly found new urgency to support the bowlers and the excitement reached fever pitch when Hastings reach the last over on 189 for seven.

The odds of scoring three runs to win were still in their favour but pace-bowler Richard Tudor bowled Richard Burnett with his first bell and then had 45-year-old wicket-keeper Phil Wren caught by Hutchinson at mid-on with his econd delivery.

Last man Claude Duval survived the hat-trick but his wild swing off the penultimate ball saw Hutchin-son hold onto a skier to clinch a startling two-run win for Shrews

Edgar keeps England hanging on

TRENT BRIDGE: New Zealand, with five second innings wickets in

On what has become the slowest pitch of the year, England are being made to work quite hard at bowling New Zealand out a second time in the fourth Cornhill Test match. Needing a little matter of 511 to win New Zealand, who started batting just before i o'clock yesterday, were 167-5 at the close of play. The match and the series end today.

It was at Trent Bridge in 1973 that New Zealand, when set 479 to win, gave England a real fright. With Congdon and Burgess both making hundreds they lost by only 38 runs. If nothing like that is happening this time. England were still quite relieved last night when they got rid of Edgar, who had held them up for four hours and a half and must have been beginning to think of his innings as being good practice for today.

Following scores of 84 in the second Test match, 70 in the third with 76 yesterday, Edgar has had a good, resolute series. By the time Cok accounted for him England had had to resort to some gentle off spin from Smith and an ver or two of the same from Botham - a way of saying. perhaps, that they could have done with another specialist

An imnings of 21 not out by Bill Athey, who had earlier collapsed in pain from the injuries received in a car crash on Saturday night, yesterday gave Yorkshire the narrow victory which keeps them at the top of the John Player League, Athey, who had faced just one ball from Holding, was escorted from the field only to return when his team had collapsed to 12 for 6. He struck four fours and in company with Dennis guided Yorkshire home with four balls to spare.

At ten Derbyshire's modest total ad seemed to after little to cause yorkshire any undue concern. The innings, however, had an ill-starred beginning. After the early loss of Athey, who had suffered severe bruising from his seat belt, Mortensen struck twice in his third

Coxed four progress to Friday's semi-final

From Jim Railton, Dulaberg, W. Germany Six British men's heavyweight crows competed in yesterday's heats of the world rowing championships on the Duisburg Wedau course.

Only the British men's coxed four made progress, advancing directly to next Friday's semi-final rounds.
The men's double and single sculls: coxiess pair and four together with the British eight, now face repechages tomorrow to decide their fac. British coxiess pairs stroke, 20 year-old Salih Hassan, too, had an unfortunate baptism, cutting his finger just over an hour before his heat yesterday morning.

The British coxed four had one of the easiest rides of the day drawn against Poland, Bulgaris and Japan with the first three qualifying for a semi-final place. The Japanese were left almost ten lengths in arrears and the British four, looking very comfortable, crossed the line first for the one and only time as far as the Union Jack was concerned. In another best New Zealand, the Soviet Union, East and West Germany, overlapped at the finish with the West Germans sent to the Britain's double scullers, Chris Baillieu and Jon Spencer-Jones, were just under a length short of qualifying yesterday behind West Germany, the Soviet Union and Fance. But they did not inspire.

Salih Hassan, in his first senior memanional race, had to have three stitches inserted in a finger without the help of anaesthetic. Understanably, he and his partner, Julian Scrivener, stopped rowing yesterday morning after covering some 750 metres, but eventually restarted to completed the course and first place in the repechages. All but four of the mineteen men's single scullers, including Steven Redgrave of Britain, used sliding riggers, but Redgrave's hear included Peter Michael Kolbe of West Germany the 1981 world champion, and Redgenve came in fourth to face now what is likely to be an extremely lough repechage. The coxless four too ran into ane coxiess four for ran info-extremely tough company and finished in fifth piace in the heats. There were three attempts to get the first heat of the men's rights under way early in the evening, and a delay of twenty minutes.

Surprisingly, it was the Czechs, who eventually came through closely pursued by the Soviet Union, France and New Zealand with Great Britain in last place.

MOTOR RACING: CRASH UPSETS WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP LEADERS

Arnoux capitalises on collision

The World Championship bettle was thrown wide open yesterday when Ferrari drivers Rene Arnoux and Patrick Tambay finished first and second in the Dutch Grand Prix after the two championship leaders. Alain Prost and Nelson Piquet had collided while fighting for the lead and retired with damaged cars. Arnoux is now only eight points behind Prost, while Piquet and Tambay are joint third, only six points further behind with three races still to come.

races still to come.

The accident occurred at the end of the main straight on lap 42 when Prost left his braking very late in trying to overtake Piquet's car which had led from the start. The Renault was first into the corner but with all its brakes locked up the car slid wide into the path of Piquet's Brabham-BMW which was shunted off the circuit. Prost continued for off the circuit. Prost continued for about half a lap; then his damaged front wing folded under and sent his car straight off the track. Neither

"It was my fault emisely," Prost said. "I made a mistake." But Piquet was philosophical. "We were Piquet was philosophical. "We were both fighting hard for both the race and the championship and it was just one of those things. I know Alain wouldn't do something like that on purpose."

Third place by John Watson was an unexpected bonus for the Marlboro McLaren team after Niki Lauda had been forced to retire LARGE MEAT DECEN TO FEMTE SKITE place with mew TAG turbo-powered car during the early laps, he locked up with brake problems. Watson, who expects to also have a turbo car for Monza in two weeks' time, claimed tag. Earlier, Elio De Angelis had Detek Warwick's long wait for his first championship points is over, the falented Toleman-Hart driver claiming fourth place the day after his 29th birthday. "Having had so much bad luck in the past. I was wondering what was ging to stop me all the way through that last lap," he mid.

Nigel Mansell, however, was not so lucky. After running as high as sixth place with his IPS Lotus during the early laps, he locked up his brakes going into a corner and driver, who had run second in the opening laps after a meteoric start from eleventh on the grid, later dropped back and had the mistortune to run over and break an ATS engineer's foot during a midrace pitstop. It was a black day for the ATS team, whose driver, Manfred Winkelhock was disqualified for starting from his normal grid position instead of from the back after being late out of the pitsa. He had been running amongst the top ten before being black-flagged.

However, by half distance Arnous had improved to third and Tambay had climbed through the field to sixth place. With the help of the Prost-Piquet incident and a rapid 10-second refuelling stop, Arnoux was suddenly holding a commanding lead of 45 seconds over Patrese, whose Brabham-BMW later succumbed to turbo failure

Winged keel yacht is first of a faster series

Gentle Lexcen designs even more trouble for Americans

The New York Yacht Club have, for the moment, cantulated. The keel controversy is shelved, at least antil academic discussion later in artic controversy is snewed, at least antil scadernic discussion later in the autumn, with American hostilities exposed for what they were, expedient manoeuvring outside the existing, mutually negotiated Conditions of Racing.

Yet the man relactantly at the centre of the row, the humorous self-efficing Ben Lexcen, has further had news for the NYYC, whether or not they successfully defend the America's Cap. The designer of the revolutionary 12-metre Australia II, with its winged keel, believes that his inmovative boat, which yesterday began the final elimination series against Victory "33 to decide the right to challenge, is only the beginning. Weary from the emotional stress under which he has found thinself for several weeks, he sold me:

"I could build a boat now which would be much faster, I knew even before Australia II was finished that before Australia II was finished that there was a still better way, but during all the work on tank testing we had to freeze the design at some point. I know that I have the right idea, even if I haven't got it exactly right this time. If the international Yacht Racing Union keel committee do not ban it, and this is supposed to be a development class, then this design would be the next generation of 12 metres. There's much improvement still to come."

Lexcen, a self-taught marine architect — "why go to college to be taught the wrong things by professors who can't earn a living outside" — built his first buat, a canoe, as a bey out of ply boxwood:

If we were hasty, we could get any other boat disqualified before every start" - cornering then actically after the 10-minute gan - "but we wouldn't stoop to that".

He lives for the race: a tanned, windswept man with sinaggy hair and tatty tee-shirt, whose first love was the Sydney one-design 18-footers in which he was unbeatable as a young man. He designed his first America's Cap boat over 12 years ago, Southern Cross, and has built nothing but Twelves ever since, except the occasional boat for friends.

He knew from the start this time he was putting his neck on the block.

"People don't give Alan Bond and his syndicate the credit, but we took his syndicate the credit, but we took a big risk coming out here with this design. We could have looked pretty stupid, though in fact it's not as radical a design as we ourselves thought." Sitting on the rail of one of the old waterfront piers, his bicycle parked alongside, he confesses to being worried that the boat is in fact not last enough!

"It's winning races, but in me is in fact not last enough?

"It's winning races, but in my opinion not by enough. Sure, match-racing tactics are important, but the crew always want to win by as much as they can. The failure of Liberty to establish a clear advantage over rivals Defender and Courageous — even though Tom Biackalier on Defender was told at the confusion of Saturday's racing that he was "excused further participation, ie was side-lined from the remaining trials — has heightened the belief of Couner and the NYVC that they may finally be about to surrender the trophy. Lexcen is convinced this explains the recent hostilities.

When NYYC commodores Robert Stone and Bob McCullough sat up there on the platform at the press conference in Newport, Armoury, explaining their sudden about turn on Friday evening, the withdrawal of all acrossitions against Australia II, their feeble claim of having been obliged to "investigate" was about as convincing as the man in the Trojan Horse saying they had merely slipped inside for 40 weeks. But win or lose, I think Lexcen will keep going. He bounced back But win or lose, I think Lexcen will keep going. He bounced back from being stranded in the Isle of Wight with a wife and child and barely the price of a ticket back to the mainland. RACING: GORYTUS TO RETURN TO UNITED STATES AFTER FAILING AGAIN

Final chapter in the 'wonder horse' story

Gorytus is unlikely to run in England again after his disappointing performance behind Montekin in the Waterford Crystal Mile at Goodwood on Saturday. Dick Hearn, his trainer, said yesterday that he had not vet been able to contact Mrs J. Mills, the horse's owner in the United States, but that he thought it likely that Gorytus would be returning to that country. Gorytus started favourite at 6-4, After looking a possible winner in the straight the Nijinsky colt weakened in the last furlong and finished fifth of the six runners. This was confirmed after the horse had finished fifth to Lomond at the recent York Ebor meeting, the altered going was thought to have been responsible for Gorytus fading in the last quarter of a mile, where he finished last of four behind Diesis, the finished fourth to Caerteon in the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup.

Since then he has continued to work impeccably at West Ilsey and over the distance of Saturday's race and on a sound surface it was thought that the horse's chance had come at last, But in the paddock beforehand Gorytus was showing tell-tale signs of nervousness. The Times guide to career training

Non-vocational studies can prove fruitful

Here is a puzzle for the parents of Alevel students. When is a degree course apparently full but actually empty? The answer is: When it is at a Polytechnic.

Many students in recent months will have applied to polytechnics and institutes of higher education as a asplication as a safety measure in case their UCCA application failed. But now that the A-level results are published, large numbers of those applicants will melt away, leaving the polytechnics and institutes with thousands of vacant places. The lescon is the total of the leaves. places. The lesson is that as long as you have the minimum entry requirements (of two GCE A-levels and three O-levels) there is still everything to play for.

The range of degree courses outside the universities is very broad, embracing both arts and science, vocational and non-vocational subjects. Although government policy during the next two or three years is likely to move in favour of these courses with a specific career outlet there are still many options in humanities and liberal studies. History, English, drama, geography, social studies are all well represented, in addition to the pure sciences.

As school-leavers become more selective and critical of what colleges can offer, they may well question the validity of participating in such courses on the ground that rising graduate unemployment is hitting them hardest. In statistical terms, their anxieties are justified. Recent figures show, for example, that 14.3 per cent of polytechnic history students were unemployed compared with a mere 1.7 per cent law students. And there was 12.9 per cent unemployment among modern in-guists, compared with 2.9 per cent for the mathematicians and computer

Although there is no dispute that such figures clearly indicate the vulnerability to the dole queue of the non-university, non-vocational de-gree student, that is not the end of the story. There are still potent attractions in being a student for three or four years, and many would claim that there are also general benefits from higher education which en-hance the student's employability regardless of degree subject.

For example, according to Anne Venables, the senior tutor at Worcester Institute of Higher Education, only four out of 150 of her non-vocational students failed to find employment last year. This she thought was because of the careful nurturing of individuals during the course and a lot of activity and support from the college's career adviser. Because of the small-scale nature of the institution there was room within the combined studies degree to develop high levels of communication-skills, analytical and problem-solving powers and to equip students with computing and nume-racy. As a result, the graduates were able to demonstrate personal qual-ities acquired through the course even though the subject matter had no specific career relevance.

In a third article on degree courses outside universities, Edward : A. Fennell discusses some non-traditional outlets

Some courses are more vocational than they might appear. The degree in English and media studies at Dorset Institute of Higher Education is a good example of this. In the last year a number of full and part-time staff have been recruited from people with solid broadcasting experience. The aim of the course now is toprepare students for entry into localradio, newspapers, video companies and so on. There are even nego-tiations going on for the course to be recognized for accreditation by the joint advisory council for the training of radio journalists.

This move represents, in fact, a recognition by the colleges of the need to meet demands from students for an orientation towards the jobs market. Academic worthiness is no longer self-sufficient. Courses, like people, are being judged on results.

For most students, employment success has to be a big priority even though they may not be clear about their particular destination. Few 18year-olds can afford to be nonchalant about their career. But clearly the interest of the course has to be taken into account. Because many of the non-vocational courses at polytechnics and institutes are still very new they often provide a freshness and originality which some of the university courses lack.

They also offer a breadth which is absent from many of the traditional, strict single discipline courses. The overall level of all courses is supervision of the Council for National Academic Awards, so there are no real grounds for anxiety about the objective standards of the course Even so, courses are shaped by students as much as by tutors. Entry requirements are lower than those of the universities (for example a norm of two D's at Worcester) and this may be reflected in the general calibre of the student. Of course if you happen to have rather mediocre

A level results that may be an advantage. And just because you have failed to score well at A level this need not determine your subsequent performance in the degree course. Through maturity, increased specialization and better motivation, the results in the final degree may be much better. But notwithstanding the general observation that many of the general humanities and science degree courses outside the universities are very worthwhile, there must be a word of warning on being selective In terms of atmosphere, ambience and facilities there is a great difference between, say, an inner city poly and an institute of higher education in a cathedral town. Some thought must be given to the most appropriate style of college for the individual student. The right course at the wrong institution can easily produce three years of unhappiness.

Swift action, however, must be taken. "Speed is of the essence at this stage", said Anne Venables, and she went on to encourage applicants to contact the tutors directly at their preferred institution to discuss the likelihood of acceptance.

Polytechnic applications may be made direct to the individual institutes. For the Institute of Higher Education it is necessary to make a formal application through the Central Register and Clearing House, 3 Crawford Place, London W1H 2BN. For information sheets on the polytechnics and the Institute of Higher Education, send a stamped adressed envelope (A4 size) to Career Horizons (Higher), The Times, Room 137, 200 Gray's Inn Road,

Food sales title moves away from the 'cloth cap'

By Derek Harris, Commercial Editor

J. Sainsbury, the London-based retail chain, has after a see-saw battle of just over six months won the title of Britain's biggest-selling grocer. The company has wrested it from the Co-op, the stambling giant of the high

There are some hard commer cial reasons why Sainsbury is surging ahead. But there are others, rather less definable, which have to do with the Co-op's cloth-cap image and the way multiples like Sainsbury have taken the most advantage of changes in social patterns that are emerging in what, and how, people buy.

In the package grocery market, which acounts for around 40 per cent of all food trade, Sainsbury has just scored its biggest monthly lead, nearly a full percentage point ahead of the Cop. authoritative sources say.

The Co-op, which is an amalgam of 135 different retail societies throughout the country, has been level with or ahead of Sainsbury three times this year, according to monthly trade

But the average performance has now crucially swung in Sainshury's favour. Over the first seven months of this year the Sainsbury average comes out at 15.57 per cent, against the Co-op's 15.34 per cent. Taking in two December soundings pushed the Co-op average to 15.43 per cent. In the food market as a whole Sainsbury now claims rather more than 9 per cent share. The latest Co-op estimate, for 1982, was that it then held 8.7 per cent of the food market, down from 9.2 per cent the year before.

One question is how far the two contenders are in different markets as shopping, and eating, habits have changed. Modern superstores are geared to car-borne shoppers, who in one stop pick up a week's or month's household needs.

In the superstores fruit and vegetables have seldom been crisper-looking their butchery is taking trade from local butchers: the fishmonger's slab of fresh offerings is being reintroduced in many superstores after a period when traditional wet fish outlets have been declining. The balmy smell of freshly-baked bread wafts along the food aisles from in-store bakeries. Sainsbury quickly seized on the changes, first in its southern stronghold, but with a progressive more north, into Yorkshire and Lancashire. It has opened more than 230 supermarkets, of which 45 are superstore-style, with another nine superstores due to open this year. A further five are due next year, mostly in the

The Sainsbury aim is to build customer confidence. Quality hygiene are al elements in creating the total shopping experience. To spice that up Sainsbury is launching new products at the rate of 350 a year, me under its own label and others from key manufacturers.

Mr Robin Whithread, Sainsbury's director of marketing, said: "Consistency and flexibility are fundamental to our success. Consistency in offering value for money regardless of how strong price competition is; flexibility in responding to ever-changing customer needs which are a direct result of changing lifestyles".

Catering for the needs of the increased number of working wives was crucial, including longer shop hours, which Sain-sbury has extended by nearly a quarter over the past four years, Mr Whithread added. Some of the differences between Sainsbury and the Co-op can be discerned from their relative sales of certain goods.

Market share in package groceries

The Co-op is the top seller of teabags (and, less expectedly, of coffee bags). It is the number one crispbreads seller, but Sainsbury sells the most wine.

In one week in July, of all fresh fruit juices sold, Sainsbury accounted for 20.9 per cent, while the Co-op sold 12.5 per cent. The Co-op sold more canned food: 16.6 per cent, against Sainsbury's The Co-op traditionally has tended to sell to the lower socio-economic groups. But at the new Co-op superstore at Yiewsley in London, Mr Philip Spicer, national manager (food) for Manchester-based Co-operative Retail Services (CRS), said: "In our better, newer stores we are section of people that any of our competitors are getting."

One reason for the Co-op's faltering sales performance is that while it has been phasing out an historical backlog of old, smaller retail outlets, it has, because of funding problems, been slower than its rivals in switching to more modern stores.

Only a few individual societies only a lew individual societies moved quickly into superstores. Co-op retail investment as a percentage of sales is barely a third of Sainsbury's, although CRS, the biggest Co-op retailer, invests at twice the Co-op

The Co-op has 55 supersto and 1,580 supermarkets. Yet Sainbury, with fewer outlets, has mounting profits, while the Co-op mounting profits, while the Co-op retail losses grow.

That points to a Co-op productivity problem, underlined by its much lower sales per square foot compared with other key multiple grocers, as measured by the Institute of Grocery

The problem for the Co-op is speeding up the conversion from old to modern stores before the stock potential sites starts running out in a few years' time.

Sainsbury is not complacent.
Mr Whitbread said: "A good reputation is fine, but in the high street you cannot rest on that. You have got to keep getting it right."

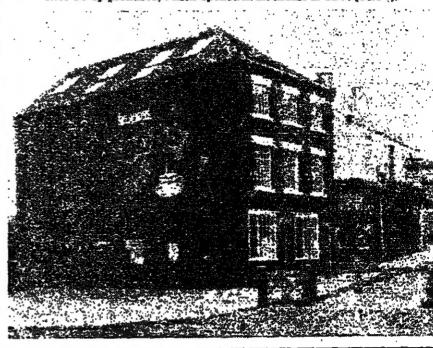

recent growth of food sales by Marks & Spencer, which has concentrated on the development of fresh produce and prepared Food now accounts for nearly wo-fifths of all Marks' United Kingdom sales, placing the company among the top six food At the volume end of the business. Sainsbury is also under pressure from the other multiples which have been expanding into superstores. Tesco Stores in the package grocery market now has a 14.5 per cent share.
